

Sarah and Jeffrey Yourman of Fair Lawn,

New Jersey both have cystic fibrosis. But thanks, in part, to research done by America's Pharmaceutical Companies, they can run and play and rollerblade and swim with the best of them.

Breakthrough medicines discovered and developed by pharmaceutical companies have more than doubled the life expectancy of cystic fibrosis patients over the past three decades. One new medicine approved last year, three more are in testing, and there's a realistic hope for a cure. Investing $20 billion a year in research, America's Pharmaceutical Companies won't rest until we turn this hope into a medicine.
